Ice road truckers darrell ward died

Darrell Ward, star of the History Channel reality show Ice Road Truckers, was killed in a plane crash in Montana. He was 52. The Missoula County Sheriff's Office identified Ward - a Deer Lodge native - and the second victim, 56-year-old Mark Melotz on Sunday. It is with great sadness that we announce that we have lost our Legend of Montana at the age of 52, reads a press release posted on Ward's Facebook page. The crash occurred as the pilot appeared to be landing a Cessna 182-D at Rock Creek County airport when something went drastically wrong, said Sheriff's Capt. Bill Burt. The plane tried to climb and seemed to have stalled. The Associated Press reported that eyewitnesses saw the plane waiting through a tree stand. According to a press release, Ward traveled to Missoula to film a new documentary series about recovering the wreckage of the plane before he and his pilot crashed. The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the crash. Ward recently learned that Ice Road Truckers had been renewed for the 11th season, which was to be filmed during the winter of 2017. When Darrell didn't hit Ice Roads, he returned to Montana doing what Darrell loved best as a log trucker and occasionally assisted local authorities in fighting forest fires, the statement said. Self-proclaimed Adrenaline Junky, Ward joined the show in season six. He was known to donate to his community, a statement announcing his death said, and he reportedly ran a food drive for flood victims in Louisiana. Ice Road Truckers premiered on the History Channel in 2007. It included harrowing trips made by truck drivers on seasonal routes, braving items through frozen lakes, rivers and mountains in the Arctic territories of Alaska and Canada.The series was an instant hit for the channel as it received record high viewership over time and rave reviews.
